

Paul Meltzer
Senior Vice President, Product Management

Paul Meltzer is our Senior Vice President of Product Management, and he is responsible for the continuous reinvention of our high-speed Internet and telephony products. Since his arrival in 2006, we have increased the speeds of our Insight Broadband service to become the fastest available in all the states we serve. In that same time, we have deployed a VoIP phone service across almost our entire footprint.

When he's not working, Paul can be found alternately roaming the streets of Brooklyn and the prairies of north Texas. Splitting his time between two such dissimilar terrains comes naturally to an Insight multitasker. He's as enthused by a genuine Brooklyn bagel and a bike ride over the East River bridges as by biscuits and gravy near the courthouse and a night two-stepping in a honky tonk.

Paul has spent the last decade working in the cable industry, much of it developing the Optimum Online business at Cablevision. His previous adventures included launching Digital TV for Continental Cablevision/MediaOne and developing and launching new products for divisions of General Mills and the Campbell Soup Company. He earned an MBA at the Tuck School at Dartmouth College, a bachelor's degree in Philosophy at Wesleyan University, and a doctorate in hard knocks from the New York City subway system.
